Captain's Midday Update

Should you wish to hear the Captain's Midday Update from the comfort of your stateroom, please tune your television to Channel 14 at 12noon today.

"The men of coterie would always go to the smoking room, and almost every evening join in conversation with some of the well-known men we meet there..."

First Class passenger Archibald Gracie

The Art of Navigation

The birth of the art of navigation is said to have taken place around 3500 B.C. The first navigators stayed close to shore and navigated by sight of landmarks or land characteristics that they could see. Usually they traveled by day and sought a calm harbor or anchorage at night.

When they did venture out of sight of land, the navigator was able to determine his latitude by observing the height of the sun during the day and the North Star at night. However, the navigator had no way to accurately determine longitude and therefore, once out of sight of land, had no idea how far east or west he was. Since time was measured with a Sandglass and speed was estimated by watching pieces of seaweed pass by the hull, these early calculations were often way off.

One of the earliest man-made navigation tools was the mariner's compass, an early form of the magnetic compass. Initially used only when the weather obscured the sun or the North Star, these first compasses were very crude. Early mariners found the compass inconsistent - most likely because they did not understand that it pointed to the magnetic north pole, not true north.

Mariners soon began to realize that maps would be helpful and began keeping detailed records of their voyages that land-based mapmakers used to create the first nautical charts called Portolan Charts. Other instruments used by mariners of the past were the cross-staff and the sextant to measure the angle above the horizon of the sun and stars to determine latitude. The much more portable (and accurate) sextant, the astrolabe was used to measure the altitude of a sun or star.

James Cook of the British Royal Navy used the seagoing chronometer to circumnavigate the globe and when he returned in 1779 his calculations of longitude based upon the chronometer proved correct to within 8 miles. Cook completed such accurate and detailed charts during his voyage that he changed the nature of navigation forever and charts were rapidly developed around the world.

Today's modern cruise ships are equipped with a multitude of high tech devices to keep their course as they trek across the globe to exotic ports of call. GPS (Global Positioning System), multiple navigation radars, echo sounders, adaptive self-tuning autopilot, fiber-optic gyro heading reference systems, Doppler speed logs, and electronic chart displays... these are just some of the equipment you will find on the bridge. But the ancient art of navigation still has its place alongside them as savvy sailors often maintain a sextant, chronometer and an almanac at hand.

HELPFUL HEALTH INFORMATION

Medical experts tell us that the best way to prevent colds, flu, or gastrointestinal illnesses - such as a Norovirus that can be transferred easily through person-to-person contact - is to simply wash your hands thoroughly with soap & warm water after restroom breaks & again before eating anything. Symptoms of Noroviruses include an upset stomach, vomiting & diarrhea. In fact, the only illness that is more prevalent is the common cold. Should you experience any gastrointestinal illness, please visit the ship's medical facility for a complimentary consultation & treatment if necessary.

CAPTAIN Jason Ikiadis

Jason was born in Guildford, England into a seafaring family but now lives in Southampton with his family.

His career started on general cargo vessels in 1984, soon after he switched to cruise vessels and has served on a variety of vessels including passenger ferries and Captain on a private yacht for a Saudi Arabian family.

He obtained his Master's license in 1998 from the Newcastle Maritime centre in England.

In his spare time Jason is a Rugby fanatic and used to play though unfortunately age/injury finally curtailed his international career!

Jason has been with Azamara Club Cruises since July 2007 and is proud to welcome you onboard the Azamara Journey and experience her unique atmosphere.

Tonight's Entertainer – VERONICA MCSWINEY

Veronica McSwiney, one of Ireland's most popular pianists hails from Dublin. She studied at the Municipal School of Music and won all the major competitions at the Feis Ceoil by the age of eighteen. Her concert engagements took her to the USA, Europe and the USSR, being the first Irish artist invited to tour there..

She has performed throughout the UK with British orchestras, including the London Symphony Orchestra, the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra, the BBC Philharmonic and others. Veronica has worked with many of the world's great musicians including James Galway and Nicolai Gedda. She was the music director of Irish National Opera.

Amongst her recordings are the 18 John Field Nocturnes; considered to be the finest available today.
